

3 THINGS to Know About Me...

1. I grew up in College Station, TX, avoided the Aggie cult, and instead joined the Marines. After my time was up, I came back to Houston to study Computer Science. After two long semesters, I dropped out of school and quit my job to launch my first startup building software for oil & gas companies.
2. I've become more of an athlete in my thirties than I ever was as a kid. I've trained Brazilian Jiujitsu over the past five years and have been spending more and more time playing Pickleball recently.
3. People say I resemble comedian TJ Miller.

Jake Corley
Co-Founder / Chief Community Officer
Digital Wildcatters

Q & A

Building the Energy Community

How did your team start Digital Wildcatters?

Digital Wildcatters started off as a podcast - the Oil & Gas Startups Podcast. We started building up a following on social media and soon started hosting events to bring the community together.

Tell us about your Energy Tech Nights

Energy Tech Nights are where the future of energy meets today's innovators. Startups and energy disruptors showcase their cutting-edge solutions to energy companies and top-tier investors. We keep the energy high, presentations short and give people a chance to network with the who's who in energy tech over beer and pizza. (An energy disruptor is anyone who wants to challenge the status quo in the industry and is willing to roll up their sleeves to be a part of the change they wish to see. That's a big common denominator amongst members of our community. Our mantra has been "evolve or die" for years now and the community really rallies behind that.)

What is Digital Wildcatters?

Digital Wildcatters is a community for the next generation of energy professionals. We deliver high-impact content, industry events and technology that enables our community to solve the world's energy crisis.

Just about all types of oil & gas people and companies are part of our community. I'd say we have a heavier concentration in upstream. That's split between E&Ps, OFS companies and tech companies focused on the space.

What are you most excited about?

I'm most excited about our new platform Collide. It's essentially a professional network for the energy industry. Whether you're looking for a new job, a piece of information, energy content or to connect with others in the industry - it'll happen on Collide.

To connect with Jake Corley
CLICK HERE

To connect with Digital Wildcatters
CLICK HERE

Connect with us:

Have an Oil & Gas position to fill or want to learn about our openings?

CLICK HERE or email clark@energysearchassociates.com

Follow us on